Harding's Radicalism in Western Speeches Mere Play to the Galleries

President Aspires to Role of Moral Leadership Thru Sensational Pronouncements Designed to Catch Favor of Disgruntled Critics, Says David Lawrence—Borah Warms Up to Regular Republicanism As Modified by Chief Executive

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

HELENA, Mont., July 2—President Harding is aspiring to the role of moral leadership which gave Woodrow Wilson and Theodore Roosevelt their hold on that great body of independent voters, sometimes called "progressives" who swing the balance of power in the American electorate today.

Tingling his speeches in Idaho and Montana with a little of what might in other days have been called "radicalism" the president made these significant declarations—

First, recognizing that his Hutchinson, Kas., speech didn't go to the root of the farm problem, he came out four square for the principle of co-operative marketing by the producer with a hint of co-operative buying by the consumer if the middleman didn't take warning. Definite plans have not been worked out but will be submitted to congress next fall.

Second, he struck boldly at those Republicans of the conservative variety who since the campaign of 1920 have sought to convey the impression that with Harding in the whitehoue, union labor would be fought with the influence of the federal administration and that the "open shop" would be made the rule rather than the exception.

Third, the president preached a sermon on the proper relations of woman to the home but pointed out that social justice demanded living wages for the father lest the mother, too, be compelled to work to support the family. Mr. Harding's statement in his speech here that the high scale of wages brot by the war had done a great deal to correct iniquities in America's economic system was coupled with remarks that he didn't sympathize with those who shout for

FEARS WAR LURKS IN LIQUOR'S WAKE

NEW YORK, July 2—New war clouds are gathering over dry America. Prohibition, the international enforcement of the Volstead act is the breeze fanning the flame. Rear Admiral Bradley Fiske, visiting New York holds this belief.

"I was berated soundly for predicting a World war in 1914," Admiral Fiske said today. "I was right then."

"The four greatest countries in the world have taken sides on an issue—the prohibition issue. America is on one side announcing its stand pat policy—England and France and Italy on the other. They, too are stand patters.'"

SELECTIVE PLAN OF IMMIGRATION URGED BY DAVIS

Labor Secretary Will Sail for Europe Wed. to Study Subject

WASHINGTON, July 2. — The time has come for the United States to establish an aggressive labor policy, Secretary of Labor Davis, remarked as he announced today that he was going to Europe, to make a first hand study of the whole immigration situation.

Accompanied by Mrs. Davis he will sail from New York July 4, on the maiden trip of the Leviathan. His first stop will be Paris. He plans to study conditions in Poland, Austria, Hungaria, Czecho-Slovakia, Constantinople and Italy before returning to England to confer with British officials regarding the situation at Ellis island, about which complaint has been made in the British parliament.

After a visit to his boyhood home in Wales, the labor secretary plans to return to the United States about August 15.

"The time has come for us to establish our own immigration policy without relying on certain foreign countries to establish it for us," Davis said. "The time has come for us to say who shall come to our shores. The time has come for us to inaugurate the selective system of immigration and it will be my aim to study every phase of this subject while abroad. There are good men and women in all races and I am not prejudiced against their religious views if they live up to them and aspire to become good American citizens if we permit them to land upon our shores."

Reports reaching the labor department today from various immigration stations indicate that very few aliens will be returned by the steamship companies. Some fines against steamship companies may be assessed for bringing aliens who are manifestly ineligible for admission under the immigration laws, it was indicated.

BALDWIN MAY OPEN PARLEY WITH BERLIN

Direct Negotiations On Reparations Forced by France

VERBAL REPLY

Expected From Poincare to British Questionnaire

BY D. M. CHURCH

LONDON, July 2—A report was persistently circulated today that Premier Stanley Baldwin is anxious to open direct negotiations with Germany on the reparations issue.

The premier was represented as feeling this necessity was forced on England by France's apparent intention to adhere to its policy of taking no steps toward a settlement of the Ruhr problem until London, tacitly at least, recognizes its right to occupy the Ruhr.

It was claimed that reports of independent action by England on reparations were premature. If, however, France's answer to the British questionnaire on the French Ruhr policy does not show a solution then the acbinet will consider independent action, it was said.

Denial was made at the foreign office that England and the United States are considering a plan to force Action from France thru co-operative demand for payment of France's war debt.

Instead of sending a written reply to the questionnaire, Premier Poincare apparently has determined upon a verbal answer.

Count De St. Aulaire, French ambassador to London, has received instructions that will enable him to reply to the questionnaire, according to Paris reports.

Today Lord Curzon and the French ambassador will hold a conversation on the subject and the exchange of views is regarded here as of the utmost importance. Some members of Baldwin's cabinet are understood to be opposed to separate negotiations with Germany, but their position undoubtedly will be weakened if the outcome of negotiations today is not favorable.

The belief here is that Premier Poincare is most anxious to hold cordial relations with the British government but is not willing to change his announced policy of taking no settlement of reparations until "passive resistance" has ceased.

One of the items in the British questionnaire formulated by Lord Curzon inquired what was the French interpretation of "passive resistence."

Before beginning conversations with Lord Curzon, Count De St. Aulaire was expected to hand a memorandum to one of the British foreign secretary's assistants. It is understood Premier Baldwin refused to meet Premier Poincare or discuss reparations with him until the British questionnaire had been answered.

REFUSES TO MARRY TO ENTER U. S.

Miss Luise Hohloch, 19, a pretty, pink-cheeked girl, from Germany, refused to marry Gottlieb Broisch, of Philadelphia, when he called at Ellis Island Immigration Station, New York Harbor, to claim her as his bride, in accordance with arrangements he had made with her parents. She said she did not love him and would not purchase entry into the United States at the price of hypocrisy. Her pluck won, and she was admitted in the custody of the Travelers' Aid Society, where she was to remain until a position could be found for her.

Former Coshocton Pastor Makes Strong Appeal for Defenseless Animals; Sermon is Reprinted

The full text of a sermon, "The Silent Martyrs of Civilization" preached on Humane Sunday by the Rev. Dr. George Brewer, pastor of the Grosse Pointe Presbyterian church of Detroit, formerly pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Coshocton, is printed in a recent issue of the National Humane Review, a copy of which has been received by Dr. H. R. McCurdy.

Rev. Brewer calls attention to the great number of animals tortured and killed each year by hunters and trappers. He says man's right to destroy animal life should terminate with his necessity for food and that no one is justified in the destruction of life in the mere desire for sport.

"Cruelty is so often thotless, but it's always wicked. If all hunters could honestly feel the appeal of the suffering animal world—of those frightened before they are killed, of those injured, but not killed, and left in the wilds to slowly die in agony, of the wildest animals of the forest that in pain have turned at last in trust to their pursuers, and of the wildest birds that in distress have turned to man for help and protection. I say if all the hunters could honestly feel the appeal of the suffering animal world, the hunting of game would lose much of its sport because of a genuine sympathy for those that need our help and protection.

"Kindness is a matter of education. One of the honored rulers of this world once said, 'No civilization is complete that does not include within its sphere of charity ... the dumb and defenseless of God's creation.' A philosopher was once asked to outline a course of education for a young prince and he said, 'During his youth teach him to be kind to every living thing lest by indulging in small cruelties he would later lose feeling for his fellowmen.'"

POPE FEARS OUTCOME OF GERMAN SABOTAGE, URGES SETTLEMENT

LONDON, July 2—A semi-official note from the Vatican declares Pius XI is grieved by the acts of German sabotage in the Ruhr, according to a Central News dispatch from Rome.

It is pointed out in vatican circles, the dispatch adds, that the Pope's recent letter to Cardinal Gasparri which roused great resentment in France, was inspired by the pontiff's fear that Bolshevism would penetrate Germany if the reparations question were not quickly settled.

The letter to Cardinal Gasparri, papal secretary of state urged that the reparations problem be considered in the Christian spirit and suggested instead of territorial occupation "other guarantees not less efficacious and certainly less painful."

SHIP LIQUOR SCRAP UP TO STATE DEP'T

President Will Not Call Extra Session to Solve Probem

HUGHES HOPEFUL

That Powers Will Accept His Plan for Twelve-Mile Limit

WASHINGTON, July 2—Because President Harding is definitely opposed to convening an extraordinary session of congress before December to deal with the international ship liquor controversy, the state department will exert every effort during the coming months to solve the problem thru diplomatic channels, government officials said today.

The next step in the negotiations now under way between the United States on one hand, and England, France, Italy, Japan and other maritime nations on the other, is the replies these governments gave to the proposal of Secretary Hughes to extend the American right of search and seizure from three to twelve miles into the sea. If foreign governments agree to this, Hughes is willing to draw up a treaty which will permit their ships to bring beverage liquor into the United States ports under seal.

The unfavorable attitude of England towards this proposition has already been made public thru the recent address of Lord Curzon in the house of commons, but the British views have not been communicated officially to America.

Hughes feels that his proposal has not been fully understood by the powers and that the way may be cleared for an agreement by future exchanges of notes and by conversations with diplomats in Washington.

If congress happened to be in regular session at this time, there is no doubt that the liquor tangle might be cleared up more speedily, but President Harding does not want a special session, so the state department will have to go along single-handed during the next six months, in trying to effect an adjustment and to avoid serious complications with foreign governments.

BODY OF YOUNG WOMAN IS FOUND

NEW YORK, July 2—With the throat and wrists bearing scars believed by police to be the marks of violence, the body of a young woman, with rings valued at $1,500 on her fingers, and clad in expensive clothing, was found today floating in the Harlem river.

The body appeared to have been in the water not less than two weeks.

The woman, a blonde, was between 22 and 25 years old, weighed 120 pounds and was five feet two inches tall.

A post mortem examination was to be held today to determine the nature of the marks on the throat and wrists.

She was riding in the car standing, despite repeated warnings to remain seated, it is said. Thousands of merry makers witnessed the accident.

Three Billion Dollars Sum to Spend Coming Year by Government

Eight and a Half Million a Day Uncle Sam's Outlay—Biggest Item Is Military Purposes Which Take 32 Cents of Every Dollar Received by Government—Customs Revenues Start Fiscal Year With Surplus of $300,000,000

BY K. K. REYNOLDS

WASHINGTON, July 2—Uncle Sam started out today, the beginning of the new fiscal year, with a little over three billion dollars to spend during the next 12 months. That is the amount appropriated by congress to carry on the business of the federal government, provide for the maintenance of army and navy and pay interest on the public debt until June 30, 1924. It means that for the next year the treasury will be handing out cash at the rate of $8,500,000 a day.

This money will not be spent haphazardly. The bureau of the budget, acting under the direction of President Harding, decided months ago where it would go. This was done so that there would be no deficit at the end of the fiscal year and a good chance for rolling up a surplus of several hundred million dollars.

The treasury begins the new year with a surplus of $300,000,000, the result of unexpected increases in international and customs revenues and retrenchment of the administration.

The postoffice department showed a deficit of some $30,000,000 for the past year, but this was a matter of bookkeeping and does not indicate any actual loss.

Approximately two thirds of the $3,000,000,000 appropriated for the fiscal year 1923-24, must be used by the government in meeting certain fixed charges, such as pensions, payments to or on behalf of veterans of the World war, interest on the public debt and the retirement of the public debt as required by law. Only about $1,000,000,000 is left to defray the normal operating expenses.

To give a better idea of just how this money will be spent, the budget has figured out receipts and disbursements in terms of the average dollar.

Of every dollar received by the treasury during the next year 72.15 cents will come from internal revenue, 12.65 cents from customs, and 15.20 cents from miscellaneous sources, such as interest on sale of property, fees, fines, gifts, etc. Out of every dollar, the treasury gets the biggest slice—39 cents, but 25 cents of this goes to pay interest on the public debt. The war department gets 8.4 cents and the navy 8.5 cents, tho it is figured that the government spends 32 cents out of every dollar for military functions, of which 13 cents is for the national defense. Under the head of military pensions, payments to world war veterans and similar fixed charges, 19 cents is set aside.

The postoffice department will receive 15.5 cents, but this is usu-

THREE ARE HURT WHEN CARS BUMP AT W. LAFAYETTE

Mrs. Gilbert Lorenz, of Port Washington, was confined to her home Monday suffering from several cuts and an internal injury; Miss Sarah Waggoner, daughter of McClelland Waggoner, near West Lafayette received a deep cut across her knee, Mr. Bowers, of Birds Run, received painful injuries about his head and body as a result of an auto collision near the second overhead bridge, west of West Lafayette, Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Lorenz, her sister, Mr. Bowers and the driver of the machine, whose name could not be learned Monday afternoon were riding in a new Ford automobile, which was struck by a new Chevrolet car, belonging to a Coshocton man.

It was said, by autoists, that the driver of the Chevrolet struck the Ford in the center of the body, when the former car attempted to make the turn to go over the overhead bridge. The Ford was headed toward Coshocton and the Chevrolet was going toward West Lafayette.

The momentum of the two cars when they came together turned both over.

Mr. Lorenz was pinned beneath the Ford. The injured were taken to the office of Dr. Wilmer Hammond, West Lafayette where they were given medical attention.

No one in the Chevrolet was hurt. Both cars were damaged. The Chevrolet car received a broken top windshield and a damaged fender.

The names of the occupants in the Chevrolet could not be learned Monday afternoon, but it was said that two girls and two young men were in the car.

GAS MASKS USED BY FIREMEN IN TENTH-ST BLAZE

A small fire in the basement of the home of John Smith, south Tenth-st gave ... local firemen their first opportunity to test their newly purchased gas masks, Monday forenoon.

The fire was started when children playing in the basement touched a lighted match to a pile of straw. When the firemen arrived the basement was full of heavy smoke and the new gas masks were donned.

The blaze was extinguished by chemicals before any damage was done. The firemen reported that the gas masks were excellent protection for work in smoke.

They are fed by small oxygen tanks and the whole outfit weighs less than five pounds. The oxygen tanks are guaranteed to be good for one year.

MINOR OPERATION

Once more the dope has been upset in the Eastern Ohio League.

Zanesville, Mansfield and Mt Vernon, three fast teams in the league went down to defeat yesterday afternoon by trailing aggregations.

Zanesville lost to Newark at Newark by a score fo 3 to 2. Cambridge beat Mansfield for the second time yesterday by a score 7 to 6 at Cambridge. The tailend aggregation, the Columbus Rutledge Grays, defeated Mt. Vernon at Mt. Vernon by a score of 8 to 0.

Every game played in the league yesterday afternoon was largely attended. Not less than 900 fans saw each game scheduled.

By trimming Canton and the Columbus nine defeating Mt. Vernon, the Regulars went into fourth position. The Regulars are now close on the heels of Mansfield. Newark went into second position by winning from Zanesville. Canton and Cambridge are tied in the league standing. Cambridge is close behind the Mounts, who fell to fifth place.

Should the locals be given the decision over Mt. Vernon that would put the Regulars within a half-game behind Mansfield for third place.

All teams in the league are scheduled with double-headers except Coshocton and Columbus who tangle for a lone game in the afternoon.

BIG FIGHT SURE TO BE STAGED, IS THE LATEST WORD

GREAT FALLS, Mont., July 2.—Everybody arose early in these parts today and bespoke his neighbor, to wit: "Well, do you think they've got the dough for Kearns, hey?"

And before any answer could be made by the neighbor folks, George Stanton stepped into the picture and made this reply:

"Yes. The greater percentage of the money was in hand over Sunday. Checks for $5,000 each arrived in the mail this morning. Within a few hours the total of $100,000 will be ready to be turned over to Kearns. There will be no slipup."

Someone sought out Kearns—and asked: "How do you feel about it?"

"O. K., O. K," he replied "I have reason to believe that the cash will be in my hands perhaps before the specified hour—mid night."

"Gosh, I'm glad the grind is over," said Dempsey. He will do no more boxing. Beyond a turn on the road Tuesday and some calisthenics, he's all thru with his training.

"Feel mighty fit," he said. "Been spoiling for a fight for two years. My chance comes Wednesday, then I will demonstrate to the world that I'm as good as I ever was."

TAGGING THE BASES

Jacques Fournier did more to defeat the Giants than his eght teammates. He knocked a homerun—his ninth of the season scoring Brooklyn's two runs, and saved the game by miraculous stops of wild throws.

The Yanks went another step on the road to pennantville when they trimmed the Athletics for the fourth straight time. They now lead the league by nine games.

The Pirates lost a golden opportunity to cut down the Gaints' lead when the Reds staged a seventh inning rally, defeating Pittsburgh 3 to 2.

The heavy hitting Tigers were held to five hits by Dixie Davis and the Browns won 8 to 0.

Gharrity's homer with the bases full was the feature of the Senators' 8 to 1 victory over the Red Sox.

Chicago dropped back to the second division when the Cards downed them, 8 to 7 in a free hitting contest.

The White Sox shot into the coveted first division today when they made it four straight from Cleveland 6 to 2.

REGULARS' NOTES

Jimmy Edwards again led the Regulars in the willow department in yesterday's tangle. Jimmy hit a slight slump in the Mendel game two weeks ago, but came to the top yesterday with a triple and two singles out of four trips up.

Kenneth Grimes, who has played shortstop for the Regulars for the past several games, left Sunday evening to join the Dillonvale ball club. The town is located near Steubenville. Kenny has work there and will play baseball with the club on Saturday and Sunday. Grimes was a big help to the locals in every game, and will be greatly missed.

The Regulars will have a new shortstop to fill Grimes' shoes on July 4. The fast infielder hails from the east, according to the local management. The new man has been recommended by Jimmy Edwards.

It was tough luck for Left Fielder Atchinson yesterday in the first of the eighth inning when he dropped Zandt's fly in left. The fast outfielder was too sure of the ball.

Willie Rasnick was sitting on the bench ready to step in should anything happen to Rea in the game. It's "Ras" turn to pitch the July 4 game. In all probabilities, Rasnick will tame the Rutledges.

Harry Storch got hold of a nice one yesterday on the end of his bat. The ball went to deep left garden and Harry got three bases. Harry also scored Edwards on a long sacrifice fly to left.

The last of the seventh inning was one of the best the Regulars have figured in this season. Seven consecutive men to bat got hits. Every man on the local team collected a hit yesterday and some got more than one.

"Imp" Brown had one opportunity of showing his throwing ability when he threw out Maley going to second in the fourth frame. They don't take many chances with Brown.

COOPERDALE WINS FROM CONESVILLE ON LATTER'S LOT

The Conesville baseball aggregation lost a hard fought game to the Cooperdale nine on the former's diamond Sunday afternoon by a score of 12 to 7.

The game was exciting at times. Owing to a bad knee, which was injured in a Fraternal League game last week, Harry Huffman failed to show his usual form for the down river boys.

"Rusty" Sestey and Gillen formed the Cooperdale battery, while Huff man and McCormick were in the points for Conesville.

Coshocton Jumps Into Fourth Position When Canton Loses Here Sun

Regulars Win Hard Hitting Game at Lake Park From Noakers by 7 to 4 Score—Rejuvenated Rutledges, Now a Dangerous Factor in League Race Come Wednesday Afternoon

Coshocton went into fourth position in the Eastern Ohio League standing Sunday by defeating the Canton Noakers at Lake Park by a score of 7 to 4, Sunday afternoon.

Hard hitting on the part of the locals was what put the game on the winning side of the fence. The Noakers used three hurlers in an effort to check the Regulars' on slaught.

The first two innings went scoreless for both sides. In the third Pitcher Rea was safe on the initial sack when Maley erred on his roller. Rea went to third on Peg Evans' single. Rea came home for the Regulars' first tally when Catcher Marr had a passed ball.

The Ice Cream Makers went into the lead in their half of the fourth with two scores. W. Moore singled. E Moore laid down a bunt and advanced W. Moore to second. E Moore expected his bunt to be a sacrifice but Rea failed to cover the infield ball, and it went for a hit. Swaney advanced the Moore brothers on his sacrifice to Gigley, who tossed to Edwards, who was covering first base, for the first out. W. Moore scored on Roth's sacrifice fly to Atchinson. Maley singled and scored E. Moore. Maley was out trying to steal second. "Imp" Brown whizzed the ball back to Grimes, who was at second base, and caught Maley flatfooted for the last out.

The Regulars tied the score in their half of the fifth. Evans was out at first, Roth unassisted. Jimmy Edwards got his first hit of the game in this inning. The drive went for three bases, over the center fielder's head. It was one of the nicest hits of the game. Edwards scored on Storch's sacrifice fly to left garden. Unger rolled out, Zandt to Roth.

One of the spectacular double plays of the game came in the sixth inning when Canton was at bat. After both Zandt and W. Moore had singled, the first two men to bat, these two men were retired in clever manner. E Moore hit a roller to Grimes. The minute the ball was hit, Zandt went to third and W. Moore to second. Zandt overran third base and started home. Brown threw the ball to Evans, who tagged Zandt. While Zandt was being run down between third and home, W. Moore was hot on the trail for third base. Atchinson came from the outfield and got Grimes' assist and tagged Moore. Swaney rolled out, Grimes to Gigley.

Coshocton drove Pitcher Mitzel to the showers in the first of the seventh. The first two men that faced him secured hits. The Noakers' management put the blanket on Mitzel in favor of Shinn. Shinn was derricked before an out was made. Shinn pitched to four batters all of whom got hits. Biggs was sent in to try his luck against the unmerciful club wielders. Biggs struck out Gigley for the first out. The first seven batters up that inning had bingled. Brown fouled out to Roth. Rea flied out to Zandt and the massacre was over.

The Noakers managed to secure another score in their last chance.

Orva Rea pitched a satisfactory game for the locals, allowing the Ice Cream Makers 9 hits, all singles. Jimmy Edwards and his crew punished the ball for 13 hits, three triples, one double and the remainder singles.

In the last two scheduled league games, Coshocton has hit its stride in the willow department. They got 10 hits in the last game with Newark and 13 yesterday.

Manager Robertson feels confident of winning the Eastern Ohio League flag. With Mansfield, Zanesville and Mt. Vernon on the losing end in Sunday's tangles, the league dope is once more upset.

Jimmy Edwards led the hard hitting Regulars in yesterday's battle with three hits out of four trials. Jimmy got a triple and two singles.

The Regulars cross bats with the Columbus Rutledges on the afternoon of July 4 at Lake Park for one game. This will be the first appearance of the Rutledges in Coshocton since the season opened.

The Rutledges trimmed Mt. Vernon at Mt. Vernon yesterday afternoon by a score of 8 to 0. This is the worst the Monts have been beaten this season.

The Coshocton fans are assured a fast battle for July 4. Manager Robertson plans to celebrate the Fourth Wednesday by turning the newcomers back.

The attendance at Lake Park is growing each time the locals are scheduled at the park. Yesterday a crowd of 900 fans saw the game. Every available space in both grandstands and in the bleachers, even the newly erected grandstand spaces were filled yesterday.

Coshocton goes to Zanesville Sunday to clash with the fast Greys, who are now leading the league.

WAR LED OHIO TO BETTER ITS WHEAT

Standard Varieties Then Adopted Have Spread to 175,000 Acres — Yield 5 Bushels More

How stress of war lead Ohio farmers to standardize on five wheat varitics which without any additional cultviating or fertilizing yield around 5 bushels more to the acre than "just wheat," is told by Wallace Hanger, crops extension specialist, in the leading article of the June Extension Service News, issued monthly from the Ohio State University.

The suggestion was first made, he said in the summer of 1918 at a war emergency session of county agents at Wooster. That fall, Williams and Auglaize Counties distributed thru the county agents' offices two carloads of Trumbull and Gladden, wheats found by test at the Ohio Experiment Station to be especially adapted to conditions in this state.

Portage, Fulhio, and Ohio 9920, varieties similarly recommended, were similarly introduced into other counties during the summer of 1919 and of 1920, but the spread of Trumbull, Gladden, and Fulhio has been the most rapid. Preble County, for example, ran its acreage of pure Trumbull wheat from nothing to 5,000 acres in two years.

Trumbull outyielded ordinary wheat an average of 3.1 bushels to the acre on Preble County farms last year: in Richland County, 4.8 bushels: in Columbiana, 7 bushels: less than 175,000 acres of the wheat additional yielding power. the standard varieties are said all to be of superior milling qualities.

Mr. Hanger estimates that no less than 175,000 cres of the wheat crop now being cut in Ohio is of these five varieties.

Financial Letter

By JAMES B. CLEWS

WALL STREET, New York, July 2—More support has come into the market from banking and other sources during the past week, with the result that some improvement in the general tone and attitude has taken place More confidence as to the future of prices exists and there is a disposition on the part of bankers to hold to the view that nothing more in the way of embarrassments is now to be expected, while values are regarded as being, in the case of most stocks reasonably low. This situation has tended to relieve the fears that had been felt by some who thought that conditions might get out of hand, due to the heavy liquidation which has been under way

Cheapness of Securities

Whatever may have been the causes of the downward movement there can be little doubt that many of the principal securities now being traded in are low in price if not actual bargains, to put away until the market recovers its equilibrium. This might not be true if the dividend situation were not as good as it is Reports from practically all industries unite in revealing an improved earnings outlook, with every reason to expect maintenance of dividends or advances in them There is a general conditions are thoroly sound and that sensus of opinion that consuch check as has been given to commodity prices has been of a nature to stabilize and confirm values rather than to impair them. Active summer and autumn business with good crop yields, such as are now promised, must eventually put stocks back to quotations which will more truly represent their real value.

Reassurance from the President

President Harding during his western journey has made several addresses which should be full of reassurance to those who have feared a disposition on the part of the Government to hamper business He has taken particularly strong ground against unfriendly attacks on the railroads and has urged a constructive transportation policy. At the same time, he has vigorously opposed coal mine nationalization as well as other radical schemes, and has spoken plainly in behalf of the reduction of taxation He is evidently disposed to take a vigorous position in the discussions of the coming autumn and winter in opposition to the extreme plans that have been proposed by some of the Congressional radicals. This should reassure many of those who have been inclined to fear that something hazardous might make its appearance at next winter's session of Congress With the President opposed to such suggestions it would be more than difficult to obtain enough votes to bring about their enactment into law, even if they should be allowed to reach the point of being balloted upon. There is a decided tone for the better in general sentiment with regard to legislative prospects, many believing that a turning point has been reached. As to this the outcome of the discussions regarding the proposed coal mining strike is likely to have a very considerable effect upon opinions It will be some time before positive assurance of an accommodation with the miners can be arrived at In the meantime some uncertainty is naturally felt by some observers of the situation. Outside of this question the absence of a considerable number of important officials from Washington seems to give assurance of an unusually quiet and unbroken period so far as governmental relation to business is concerned, this period being likely to last over the next few months, pending the time that the President returns to Washington and discussion of economic issues is resumed.

The Agricultural Outlook.

An excellent agricultural outlook seems to be revealed as reliable reports concerning crop conditions and harvesting come to hand. The yield will probably not be a record-breaking one, but it will be very satisfactory judging from present prospects, and most of the principal crops seem likely to bring good prices. This should insure a continuation of the large traffic over the railroads, which is already up to high point for the season. It also seems to indicate sustained buying power in the farming districts, due to the continuous ability of the population there to absorb staple necessities and pay for them. Such a prospect is further confirmed by the very conservative banking situation which is revealed in current figures Not only has there been no great increase in the demand for loans at banks but available figures show that even the usual seasonal growth is only about sufficient to maintain the total of outstanding credit at a normal figure The country banks are probably in better condition than they have been for a long time, being less "tied up" and more liquid than for a year or two past. This condition of affairs points to relatively easy money conditions after proportion for the heavy July 1 corporate disbursments have beenn completed and funds paid out for such purposes are returned to the banks

Foreign Uncertainties Continue

Foreign uncertainties, however, still continue, Germany and France lacking as yet the basis of an accommodation Secretary Mellon's journey to Europe, altho not technically related to the Franco German controversy, is believed by many likely to contribute to some adjustment as well as to aid in smoothing various other financial and economic issues which sprung up between this country and Great Britain Meantime the foreign trade of the United States in common with that of the rest of the world, necessarily feels some effect of the unfavorable conditions produced by France's policy in the Ruhr and Germany's manifest intention to continue her "passive resistance" to the very last To this cause perhaps more than any other may be ascribed the relative inactivity of foreign demand for our copper and some other staple products which have gone abroad in smaller quantities of late than had been expected. This relative decline in foreign requirements has cline in foreign requirements has been responsible for the comparative indisposition of copper shares to advance Nevertheless, the general condition of foreign trade at large is reported by some observers as showing improvement and the existence of a healthy tone

Market Review and Outlook

Activity on the Exchange has been the general rule during the week, but mostly at the expense of values due to a new wave of liquidation which has carried prices down in a great many instances to lower figures than those recorded last November Viewed from a business standpoint, it is hard to account for the market's continued serious retrograde movement as notwithstanding the slackening here and there in different branches, as before noted, manufacturing plants thruout the country are as a whole still actively engaged. During the latter part of the week buying orders were more in evidence, but it is realized that most of these were placed for the purpose of support rather than for accumulation on an important scale, nevertheless, if they have the effect of lessening the selling movement, as intended they will serve a good purpose until the market is able to take care of itself again. So far as the attitude of the general public is concerned it shows little change, the disposition being to reduce holdings whenever prices are bid up and this policy will doubtless be continued until accounts generally are made safe and confidence again returns. There is no question that most stocks are now really cheap, but at the moment intrinsic worth is ignored

ENTRIES MULTIPLY IN CORN KING CONTEST

Hndred Farmers Have Planted 10 Acres With Only Quarter of the State Heard From

While entries are still incomplete, there are definite indications that four times as many Ohio farmers are trying this summer to grow 1,000 bushels of corn on 10 acres than in any other one of the same years that the Ohio State University has run such a contest

Last year, 32 Ohio farmers measured yields in this contest This was in all parts of the state. So far this year, with entries at hand from only the northwestern counties, more than 100 farmers are known to have planted 10 acres of corn for the contest

Agricultural extension workers attribute the increase to two cases. First, they believe, William Gilmore's remarkable record of 131 bushels of corn to the acre, last year, has spurred other farmers to try to beat this, the world's record for 10 acres

Again, a nmber of the county agricultural agents, noting how Gilmore's performance changed corn-growing practices in Licking, his home county, have enrolled leading farmers of other corn counties not only as contestants but as "demonstrators." Miami County has such demonstration contest field in six of its townships, and a similar effort is under way in Warren, Logan, Montgomery, Madison, Champaign, Clark, Clinton, Darke, Highland, Franklin, Hardin, Lucas, Marion, Mercer, Wood, and Scioto counties

Many of these counties plan auto tours of farmers to the fields of successful contestants, who will tell how they raised their crops and what it cost them to do it

The Way Madge Speedily Won Her Battle with Katie.

IN the course of long and necessarily close study of Katie's temperament I have learned two things to which she invariably reacts with enthusiasm, no matter what the state of her mind when she receives them.

One is the prospect of excitement of any kind. The other is an appeal for aid. I also have learned the futility of trying to gloss over Mother Graham's aggravating treatment of her, although I think Katie, in her calm moments, realizes that my mother-in-law's seeming resentment against her is but a magnificent gesture of discipline which the older woman has now neither strength nor opportunity to wield.

Armed with these weapons, I had my offensive arranged, even as I closed the kitchen door after me, and released my grasp upon the girl's tense arm. I must give her no time to reflect further upon the familiar but offensive epithet, "Ape of a girl," which I was sure she had heard Mother Graham utter but a minute before.

"I know you heard Mother Graham, Katie," I began rapidly before she could speak. "And I don't blame you for being angry, but"—I hurried my words as I saw Katie snatch at her apron and throw it over her head, her invariable prelude to an hysterical outburst of tears—"but—I wish you would pass it over just this once more, at least until I know whether Mrs. Durkee is going to live or not."

"Dot Big Doctor?"

The shaking apron stretched itself into tense quiet, and then, after a second's pause, came down with an emphatic jerk. Katie's eyes, blinking with the first tears of her arrested brain storm, looked with wide, curious interest into mine.

"Vot dat you say?" she queried excitedly. "Missis Durkee, she die?"

"I don't know," I returned, my heart heavy with the knowledge that I was speaking only the truth. "But she is ill, and must go to a hospital for a possible operation."

"Den she dis all right," Katie commented, with the pessimism of her kind toward hospitals. "Oh, dot poor, sweet Missis D rkee, and she so goot! I tell you I feel awful bad by her."

Genuine grief showed through her grotesque phrasing, and I hastened to reassure her with the hope which had lightened my own heart.

"I am very sure she will be all right, Katie," I said. "I have just wired Dr. Braithwaite, Mr. Graham's brother-in-law, asking him to operate, and am awaiting a reply from him."

Katie's eyes opened wider than ever.

"Dot big doctor vot vas in var und got sooch nice medals?" she demanded excitedly.

Madge Is Relieved.

"The same doctor," I returned, smiling at her childlike enthusiasm, and remembering her hero worship of my famous brother-in-law when he had visited us before.

"Oh-h!" she carolled joyously. "Eef dot doctor coom, den Missis Durkee she live all right. Say!"—a brand new thought evidently had assailed her, and I fairly could see it rambling through her brain cells—"Eef dot beeg Doctor Braithwaite coom on here, he vill coom to house, not?"

I seized the opportunity.

"Yes, Katie, that is why I wanted to get you into the kitchen so quickly. Both Dr. Braithwaite and his wife will make A visit here in all probability. And you know how excited Mother Graham gets at the prospect of visitors. She hasn't seen her daughter and son-in-law in a long time, and she is so happily upset over it that she doesn't know just what she is saying or doing. You mustn't mind her."

"I no see how eet make her happy to call me bad name," Katie answered sullenly.

"Nor do I, Katie," I acquiesced heartily and truthfully, but with a low voice and a wary eye for my doughty mother-in-law's probable approach. "But you ought to know by this time that she doesn't mean a word of what she says. It's just a bad habit——"

"You spank babee's legs mit leetle switch ven he get bad habits," Katie began morosely, and then her sense of humor got the better of her rancor. "Eef old womens could only have leetle switches shoost same as babee boys, everyting all right. But you no vorry, Missis Graham. I no keeck oop any shindy. Dis house got to get clean all ofer, and old womans und me got no time to scrap."

And, with a long breath of relief, I realized that housecleaning for visitors would sink all differences between Katie and my mother-in-law.

HER FAVORITE PICTURE :: By Juanita Hamel

WHAT sweeter picture is there than the reflection of THE girl in a mirror—like a lovely portrait in a frame? But how disconcerting it is—how disillusioning—when it's discovered that she, also, adores this picture above all others! Joy in her beauty vanishes—faith in her disappears—and there remains only the wish that she were less conscious of her loveliness.

Somehow, you feel cheated—YOU wish to do all the adoring, yourself, now don't you?

ODD FACTS

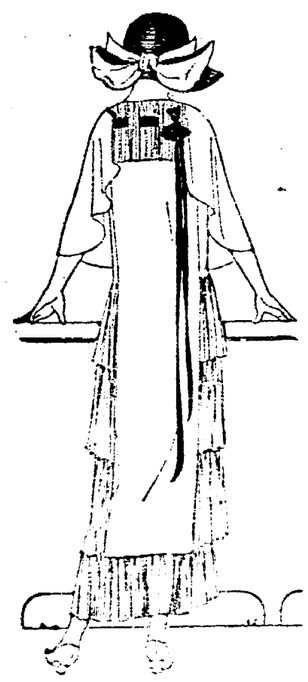

It is erroneous to suppose that the blue appearance of the ocean in clear weather is due to reflection from the sky. Some authorities say the blue color is due to the salt in the water. They cite the case of the Mediterranean which is very salty and appears exceedingly blue. The latest explanation is from Dr. F. B. Dendrick of Toronto, who tells us that the water absorbs all the other colors of the spectrum more freely than it does blue, and that hence light reflected by it or transmitted through it carries a preponderance of blue—that water scatters light more freely than air, and in this action the blue light of short wave-length again plays a preponderant part.

A giant meteorite which fell in the territory of Chaco, Argentina, 300 years ago, but which was "lost" shortly before 1812, has been rediscovered, according to explorers for the Argentine government. The mass is reported to weigh nearly 60 tons. Since 1912 several expeditions have tried to locate it. In 1872 a reward of $2000 was offered for its recovery. About the middle of the 17th century the presence of the meteorite was first reported by Spaniards who had been guided to the spot by Vilelas Indians. The object lay half-buried in the sand. Analysis showed that it consisted of meteoric iron and pure nickel and cobalt. Several pieces were sent to museums. Two pistols were made from some of the metal and were presented to a President of the United States in appreciation of his sympathy with Argentine independence.

Knife-Pleated Flounces Decorate This Dainty, Cool Frock of Dark Blue Georgette.

EVERYONE needs a cool, dark dress for summer days and these models are prettier than many blue or cooler than gingham.

This model combines the dark material with knife-pleated flounces and sleeves, a practical note in the plain dark length, which does away with the worry of replacing. To balance the plainness, there is a little collar at the back with a lighter blue velvet ribbon laced through it.

The hat is black georgette with a velvet bow of the same lighter blue shade

WINIFRED BLACK WRITES ABOUT Twenty-Five Years from Now

Copyright, 1923, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Winifred Black

WHAT will you and I be doing twenty-five years from now?

Just twenty-five years ago Professor L. J. Richardson arrived in Berkeley, California, to take a place in the faculty of the university there.

He decided to celebrate his arrival by attending a theatre in San Francisco. On the ferryboat he asked an agreeable stranger to direct him to a certain theatre.

"I'm going there myself," said the stranger. "Why not come along with me?" So the two men went to the theatre together, and as they talked between the acts the stranger said:

"I wonder what you and I will be doing twenty-five years from now?"

Professor Richardson laughed and said:

"I wonder."

Last week Professor Richardson was called up on the telephone by the man who had gone to the theatre with him twenty-five years ago, and they celebrated the anniversary by going to the theatre again—together.

Neither of them had seen or heard of the other in all that time.

What do you suppose they talked about—between the acts?

Airships and motor cars, and submarines and the radio—no doubt.

Times Have Changed

Also about the great war, and the little war that we have had since then. About the play, too, no doubt. I wonder what they would have thought of that play twenty-five years ago and what they really thought of it the other night—if they dared to think at all.

Twenty-five years ago Kate Castleton, in a gray Quaker dress and Quaker bonnet, was singing "For goodness' sake don't say I told you," and a good many men thought it was just as well for their wives not to hear it.

She mentioned a kiss in the song and said something quite iconoclastic about a squeeze, and that was very, very improper—twenty-five years ago.

Lottie Collins was coming out on the stage in those days in the black frock and veil of a widow—but when she got to the chorus of her song and began to warble "Ta-ra-ra-boom-de-ay!" it was quite easy to see that she wore red silk stockings and a wicked, though very voluminous, red silk petticoat with dozens of ruffles on it.

Naughty Miss Collins—how she did shock people twenty-five years ago.

And somebody had Muldoon, the prize fighter, play the part of the wrestler in "As You Like It," and he appeared in tights and what were euphemistically called "fleshings" in those modest days, and people wrote to the papers about it and protested.

Where Were You Then?

Sarah Bernhardt was sleeping in her coffin and being photographed in her grave clothes, with a lily in her hand.

"Patience" and "Pinafore" were all the rage, and you danced to the tune of "Dear Little Buttercup" and the "Wandering Minstrel," with the "Beautiful Blue Danube" as a regular thing.

I wonder if they talked about their personal affairs at home, these two strangers.

It is sometimes so easy to do that—with a stranger.

Wouldn't you love to sit down this very minute and tell all your troubles and all your perplexities and all your fears and all your hopes to a man from Mars, or even one from Missouri, if you were quite sure you would never see him or any of his family—again?

It really is embarrassing to cry over something with a friend and then have the friend remember what it was that made you cry years after you had forgotten all about it.

Twenty-five years ago today—where were you?

Who was your companion?

Were you better then than you are now—or worse?

Wiser or more foolish?

Happier or more unhappy?

What stories they do tell, the years—and how casual they are in the telling of them!

I wish I had kept a diary every day since I was ten—don't you?

ADVICE TO GIRLS

By ANNIE LAURIE

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE.

I am a woman 18 years of age and have been married for nearly one year. My husband is away for his health and I am living with my parents.

Since I came home, a young man whom I broke an engagement with before my marriage has been paying me attention. Do you think I am doing right, by accepting his attentions? EASTER EGG.

EASTER EGG: Indeed, you are not doing right, my dear, in allowing this young man to treat you as if you were an unmarried girl.

Keep him for a friend and allow him to call on you occasionally when there are others present. But insist on his renewing acquaintance, friendship and nothing more.

In your heart you know what is the right thing to do, don't you, my dear?

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

When a girl knows a young man very well, do you think it is "fresh" for her to call him up on the telephone? I called one young man up a few weeks ago and had quite a nice little conversation with him and it has worried me ever since.

A. M. M.

A. M. M.: It is better to allow the young men to do the telephoning, my dear.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl 20 years old. I think I am in love with a young man 23 years of age.

We have been going together about a year. He says that he loves me and will do anything in the world for me that is in his power, but a few months ago he left town to visit his relatives and he was gone one month before I received a letter from him.

He claims that he was busy. When he returned I forgave him for his long delay, and he promised to do better, but he has disappointed me two or three times since that time.

Should I continue to go with him? If I stop going with him, should I return his ring? CHO-CHO.

CHO-CHO: Don't give so much importance to letter-writing, my dear. Some people are just naturally not good correspondents. The fact that the young man is negligent about letter-writing is not a good reason for giving up his friendship.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl of 18. I love a man very much. He says he loves me.

Is it wrong to kiss a young man before being engaged?

Is it wrong to go out riding with a young man without a chaperone?

BLONDIE.

BLONDIE: It is unwise and improper to kiss a man before you are engaged.

It is much better to have a chaperone when you go driving with a young man.

What Foot Comfort Really Means to Your Beauty

By LUCREZIA BORI

The Famous Spanish Prima Donna

LUCREZIA BORI

WHEN warm weather comes many women are annoyed with the feeling which can best be described as a "shoe full of foot." Their feet feel feverish and irritated and their faces reflect this discomfort.

All of us have, at one time or another, had unfortunate experience with shoes and have been forced to go about with feet sore and aching. If this has only happened once to you, and you've hurried home to cast the shoes aside and rest your aching feet, you have never forgotten the discomfort I'm sure.

There's something about foot discomfort that draws our faces into knots, unless we use ev ry ounce of self-control that we possess. And if we are forced to do this, the experience takes so much out of us that it leaves us positively faint.

Anything but this is bearable, we think at the time, and we resolve never to undergo such a harrowing experience again. And, indeed, we need never do this, if we take sensible precautions in caring for our feet.

Choosing proper shoes is, of course, the paramount consideration. Be very sure that your shoes are neither too small nor too large before you consider taking them.

It happens that the shoes which are modish today all have fairly round comfortable toes, so I need not warn you against very pointed toes, as I might have had to a few seasons ago. But I may say, if the very pointed toe becomes fashionable again, don't go to extremes!

Now, absolute cleanliness is one sure safeguard against troublesome feet. If you wear sensible shoes and are scrupulously clean in caring for your shoes and stockings, you should have no trouble.

Bathe your feet at least once a day. If you follow my advice and take a bath every morning, you'll have no trouble about keeping your feet as well as your whole body, clean.

However, if your have particular trouble with perspiring feet, I should advise you to bathe your feet both night and morning, using lukewarm water and pure castile soap.

Here is another excellent preparation to correct perspiring feet:

Twenty-five per cent. solution of aluminum chloride in distilled water.

Bathe your feet in this solution every day for three days, then bathe them once a week in it, using lukewarm water and castile soap on other days.

You should wear fresh stockings every day, especially during the hot weather. This is very easy to do, for it's no trouble at all to wash out your own stockings occasionally. It is well if you can soak them for a little while first, and then hang them in a sunny place to dry.

Stockings wear longer if washed every day, you know, and the feeling of delicious cleanliness thoroughly repays itself. Truly, cleanliness and beauty go hand in hand.

HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

JULY

According to this day's planetary operations there should be prosperous and flourishing conditions, with a large measure of success, especially for those in the employment of others. It would be against the advice of the sages to make any important change, however, or to undertake any important journey. It would be well to keep a firm grip on tongue and temper, lest these have a thwarting effect on the good fortune forecast from the Jupiter and Sol transits.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a prosperous and successful year, if they avoid quarrels and disputes and postpone important journeys or changes. Those in the employment of others should work for promotion. A child born on this day will be fond of change and travel. It will succeed in its undertakings and rise to important position.

YOUR HEALTH

How to Treat a Burn So It Will Swiftly Heal

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Former Commissioner of Health, New York City
United States Senator from New York

DR. COPELAND

A FEW days ago I visited the medical department of a great railroad system. In this western city there is a building set apart for the medical and surgical care of the railway employes.

It is not a hospital; it is more than a clinic. It combines the social service and medical features of a great hospital's out-patient department. Every patient is studied, not alone as to his immediate need, but also with reference to his social and home surroundings.

If a man appears with a serious burn, it is not enough to apply first-aid treatment. The question arises at once what will be done to and with the wound when the victim reaches home? What happens to a burn depends on the sort of care it has outside the doctor's office. If a burned surface is kept perfectly clean—surgically clean—there is no delay in healing and little discomfort. Unless it is properly cared for, an insignificant burn may develop into an uncleanly, suppurating, dangerous sore.

It is hard to get everybody to realize that any open, raw wound is exactly the kind of an entrance germs like to discover. The warmth and moisture of the burned tissues offer exactly the soil germs need for their lusty growth.

On this account the danger of a burn does not end when the pain stops. That may be but the beginning of really serious trouble. The wound must be protected from contamination from start to finish.

After trying out all the known and approved methods of treating burns, these railroad surgeons have decided that a simple boracic acid ointment is about the most satisfactory. It may be used at all stages. It may be smeared over the surface to exclude the air and stop the pain when the accident first occurs. It may be applied daily till the cure is complete.

Sometimes a bicarbonate of soda ointment will do more to control pain, but after this has been allayed, the boracic acid ointment will be substituted.

I asked if the blisters are opened at once. The reply was that it makes little difference whether they are or not. It is understood, of course, that if they are opened, the needle is first sterilized.

The ointment is smeared over the damaged skin, a piece of gauze is applied, and then a roller bandage is carefully adjusted. The object is to exclude dirt and all contact which could possibly contaminate the wound.

There is a redressing every day or two, great care being used to avoid damage when the bandage and gauze are removed.

Needless to say, the hands must be perfectly clean and all the materials used must be surgically clean.

Answers to Health Questions

M. Q—Will you please tell me what causes loss of memory? How can I remedy this trouble?

A—As a rule lack of concentration is the cause of this condition. You can correct this trouble by concentrating your mind on what you are doing. Also try committing verses of poetry to memory, or when you are reading, try to memorize what you read. This will help you.

• • •

B. R. Q—I am a young woman 22 years old and have been hard of hearing for the past seven years. I have had my tonsils and adenoids removed, but my condition has not improved. I have tried different kinds of treatment and they have not helped me. I am very much discouraged. What would you advise me to do?

A—If the nerve is affected little can be done for you. If the deafness is due to catarrh it may improve under persistent treatment. Send a self-addressed, stamped envelope for instructions on the treatment of nasal catarrh and restate your question. I would also suggest that you consult a specialist occasionally for special treatments.

• • •

MISS A. W. Q—What can I do for a pale, sallow complexion?

A—Take plenty of outdoor exercise, see that your kidneys and bowels eliminate properly and add to your diet milk, cream and eggs. Practice deep breathing and get regular hours of rest in a well-ventilated room. For further particulars on the treatment of constipation, restate your question and enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

• • •

E. B. B. Q—Will massaging the face with cold cream tend to make it flabby and enlarge the pores?

2—Can you tell me if —— would be harmful to the face?

3—What can I do for thin eyelashes?

A—No, massage with a good cold cream is very beneficial. Try hot and cold applications alternately, each for 10 minutes, before the massage.

2—I am unable to advise you about the product mentioned, as I know nothing about it.

3—Try 1 per cent. yellow oxide of mercury ointment on the eyelashes and yellow vaseline may also prove helpful.

• • •

S. A. T. Q—My face is dry and wrinkled. What can I do for this?

A—Try hot and cold applications alternately, each for 10 minutes, and follow this with a good massage with cold cream. This tends to make the tissues of the face firm.

Dr. Copeland will answer for readers of this paper questions on medical, hygienic and sanitation subjects that are of general interest. Where the subject of a letter is such that it cannot be published in this column, Dr. Copeland will when the question is a proper one, write you personally, if a self-addressed, stamped envelope is enclosed. Address ALL INQUIRIES to Dr. R. S. Copeland, in care of this office.

THE HOME KITCHEN

The Authority on Home Cooking

Four Fine Fish Recipes for Hot-Weather Menus.

FISH is a summer standby for made dishes to be used at luncheon, breakfast or for the fish or salad course at dinner. A well-stocked emergency shelf with fish in variety and a book of good recipes means many a delightful dish, savory enough to make the partakers remark upon its excellence.

The supply of fresh fish will depend upon the locality in which you live, but canned goods may be had anywhere and at any time. Many large dealers at fish centres do an immense mail order business with which it pays the inland housewife to become familiar, as the goods are the best and the prices fair.

Japanese Scallop.

Drain, removing any pieces of shell found, one large can of Japanese crab meat and cut the meat up fine. Add a half-cupful of fine crumbs, salt, pepper, a grated onion, a teaspoonful of chopped parsley, a teaspoonful of chopped celery leaves, a small beaten egg, a tablespoonful of melted butter, a teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce and a half-teaspoonful each of sugar and curry powder. Fill buttered scallop-shells lightly with the mixture, adding a tablespoonful of cream to each, and bake 10 to 12 minutes, browning delicately on top. Garnish with sprays of fresh parsley.

Japanese Crabmeat Salad.

Prepare a can of the crabmeat—the same as for the scallop—only do not cut the meat as finely. Add to the meat a cupful of diced celery, a cupful of white lettuce leaves cut finely, four sweet pickled gherkins thinly sliced, one hard-boiled egg chopped and one cucumber pared and seeded, then diced fine. Dust with a little red pepper and salt, sprinkle with two tablespoonfuls of French dressing, then fold in enough heavy mayonnaise—made without mustard—to moisten. Serve in white lettuce leaves, garnishing with stuffed olives.

Salmon Pie.

Open, drain and free from skin and bone one large can of salmon and flake it with a silver fork. Make two cupfuls of rich cream sauce—not too thick—and add to the sauce two tablespoonfuls of well-washed capers, two tablespoonfuls of chopped celery leaves and one tablespoonful of finely chopped red peppers. Put in the salmon and let all warm and season, but do not cook. Line a deep dish with good pastry, put in the fish mixture, cover with the top crust cut to allow the steam to pass off, and bake until the crust is done. This may be used for the fish course of a light dinner, or as a luncheon dish. The juice of an onion may be added to the sauce, if liked, which improves the flavor.

Panned Fresh Shad.

Split the shad and remove the large bones. Then spread the larger part, skin side down, in a well-buttered shallow frying-pan. Sprinkle with pepper, salt, a minced onion that has been sauted in butter, a few dry crumbs and a little melted butter. Cover and set the pan in a brisk oven, cook 10 minutes and then uncover and sprinkle with a tablespoonful of melted butter and a teaspoonful of lemon juice. Allow the fish to brown and cook until a good color. Serve the fish with a good drawn butter or a smooth tomato sauce.

Good Night Stories

By Blanche Silver

DOTTY SEES A QUEER LITTLE UMBRELLA.

"WELL," laughed Dotty as she saw a tiny cricket scoot under a little toadstool. "I'll not harm you, pretty one. But you ought to be grateful for that lovely umbrella."

"I'll say he should!" laughed a merry voice.

Dotty turned around to see Squeedee, the little Joyland elfin, standing by her side.

"You see," Squeedee continued, "old Woody Woodpecker is on the hunt today and that umbrella makes a fine hiding place for crickets."

"That's just why I've said a hundred times that if I had to be anything but a little girl, I'd rather be one of the meadow folks than a creature that lives under water," laughed Dotty.

"My goodness, why?" asked Squeedee, his black eyes twinkling.

"If I were a cricket and wanted to hide, or if it rained, I'd crawl under a toadstool and use that for my umbrella. But if I were a fish or a tadpole or any of the other water folks, where in the water world could I find an—"

"Why, honey," Squeedee interrupted, "if you were a fish in a deep, blue sea, I don't think you'd rush around unhappily looking for an umbrella just because it was raining. Would you?"

Dotty giggled.

"That was silly of me, wasn't it?" she admitted. "But even so, you must admit umbrellas would be useful to fish. Suppose they want to hide or take a little nap, what do they do?"

Squeedee looked at her out of the corner of his eyes in his mysterious manner and said:

"You just come along with me. I'll show you that the water world has plenty of umbrellas—and fine umbrellas at that!"

Together they ran down to the water's edge. Dotty looked into the water at Squeedee's request. Everything began to swim before her eyes. And then, before she had time to know what was going to happen, she found herself at the bottom of the sea.

They walked through the water for some time before Dotty spied something that made her cry out in glee.

It looked exactly like an umbrella with a lovely edging of very fine transparent filaments which made Dotty think of the fringe on her pretty new umbrella at home.

From the very centre four flap-like things dangled in the water.

"Didn't I tell you?" laughed Squeedee in a soft voice, then he introduced Dotty to Mrs. Umbrella Jelly Fish.

"My goodness!" Mrs. Jelly Fish laughed, when Squeedee told her Dotty didn't know they had umbrellas in the water world. "You should see my cousin, Mrs. Rootmouthed Jelly Fish. You couldn't find a more perfect umbrella in all your meadowlands, I'm sure."

Dotty told Mrs. Umbrella Jelly Fish that she was even better looking than the toadstool and probably even more useful.

"For you can move around in the water world, and that must be a great help," Dotty laughed. "Our meadow umbrellas, the toadstools, have to stay in one spot all the time."

Just then Dotty heard the school-bell. So, bidding her friends good-by, she and Squeedee hurried back to shore and Dotty ran off to school.

"Dance of Dragon" Given on Liner As An Appeal For a Smooth Voyage

The Dragon Dance

Seattle, Wash., An age old custom of the Chinese has been revived by the Chinese members of the crew of the Admiral Oriental liner President McKinley on sailing days, in order that the vessel may be assured of a speedy, pleasant voyage to the Orient. This is the Dragon Dance, which in the Flowery Kingdom, performed in costume by carefully trained dancers, is considered an offering which even the most evilly inclined spirits cannot resist.

At a recent sailing of the President McKinley the dance was performed by an expert in a manner which brought forth furious applause from all the passengers. Wan Gun, a cook on the big liner, who for years was noted in Shanghai for his ability as a dragon dancer, was the central figure of the ceremony.

Shortly after the President McKinley got under way a three-piece Chinese orchestra made its appearance on the after deck of the liner. A huge Chinese tam-tam, gorgeously decorated, was the backbone of the trio. This a middle aged Oriental pounded rythmically, while two younger men clashed on cymbals and a big gong.

The preliminary beats of the orchestra aroused the curiosity of passengers. Within a few minutes the aft promenade and salon decks were crowded with interested spectators.

Softly the musicians set the tempo. The underlying tone of the big drum quickly took on a mysterious, throbbing quality which sent a shiver of anticipation up and down the spines of those awaiting the appearance of the Dragon.

As the pound of the instruments grew slower and softer, an awed hush fell over the watchers. Then the Dragon, huge head swaying slowly, emerged from a canvas covered "lair," erected behind a deck windless. The coaxing tempo of the music appeared to lure the big reptile on. Crouched close to the deck it crept along. Nearer and nearer it approached the orchestra, in the manner of some gigantic beast about to seize a hypnotized prey.

The fantastic head, molded from paper-maché, painted in a dozen dazzling colors, with big wagging red tongue and bulging yellow eyes seemed alive, as its motion was controled by the expert Wan Gun. The aft part of the body concealed an assistant whose every movement was timed to that of the master dancer in front of him.

A sudden crash of the cymbals, a "zoom" from the big gong, and a thunder from the tam-tam stopped the creeping advance of the Dragon. The music swelled in volume, the time advanced sharply. As if affgered the Dragon reared its head upward, eyes rolling, tongue wagging furiously. Rising on its feet, each movement in perfect time with the music, it dashed forward, then retreated. In a frenzy it danced about the deck.

Again the music softened and slowed down. The Dragon's dance diminished in activity, until it again was crawling about on deck.

A head of lettuce, attached to a long length of string was tossed in front of the creature. As the Dragon crept near it, a Chinese pulled the lettuce away, as one does when playing with a kitten. With graceful, yet grotesque bounds the Dragon leaped after its prey missing it barely by inches.

Enraged at the escape of its "prey," the dragon again resumed its wild dancing. While the music crashed and thundered in barbaric manner the lettuce was tossed directly at the high flung head. The huge jaws went open, then closed, the lettuce being crushed. Furiously the Dragon munched its "victim." Then, as the throb of the drum softened to its original soothing echo, the Dragon curled up on deck, and with a wide mouthed yawn, assumed a sleeping position.

The music died completely away, and Wan Gun, exhausted from his efforts, crept from beneath the big head to bow to the plaudits of the enthusiastic passengers.

For years Wan Gun studied dragon dancing—as the hind legs—before he ever assumed the dignity of leading the ceremony and operating the head of the symbolic creature. Then he became known throughout the Shanghai district of his native country for the cleverness of his dance which he performed in the streets with a few pennies for his reward.

A few months ago, Wan Gun, who is a still better cook than a dancer, which is indeed saying something, was engaged as one of the chef's staff on the President McKinley. When his fellow countrymen realized that the famous dragon dancer was among them, they beseeched Wan Gun to give a performance each sailing day, as an offering for a fair voyage. The dragon dancer complied, and now his performance is a feature, both with passengers and crew, each time the admiral Oriental liner sails from Seattle or Shanghai.

Girls Forget Frills at Camp, Says Camp Director

Colored kid slippers, tissue weight stockings, skeleton frocks and floppy hats are suffering a setback. Girls by the thousands are already packing their vacation bags with middies, bloomers and stout shoes of a common sense variety, according to Miss Josephine Little, director of the eight girls' camps conducted by the National Board, Young Women's Christian Association.

"Democracy in apparel is one of the advantages in camp life," says Miss Little. "When every one is dressed exactly alike in a camp uniform of white middy blouses and bloomers, it immediately eliminates class distinction or competition in dress.

"The girls themselves love the freedom from skirts, and the absence of high heels for hikes and athletics. What they shall wear or how they shall look is completely overshadowed by new interests and enthusiasms. Regular hours and the out-of-doors give them such clear complexions that even beauty lotions are soon forgotten."

The growth of summer camps for boys and girls as an educational factor has become phenomenal within the last few years, Miss Little added.

"The camp movement has the advantage of being equally popular with parents and their daughters," continued Miss Little. "The girls adore the freedom away from the family constantly looking out for them. Their parents seek the health, wholesome self-development and initiative that camps afford their daughters. Best of all I think is the comradeship. Girls learn how to live with others on equal terms away from family protection, and to respect the rights of the whole group."

Camps run by the National Board are staffed by directors counsellors, hike and recreational leaders, and instructors, all college trained young women. Within easy access of New York are camps at Poland, Maine; Altamont, N. Y.; Cornwall Bridge, Connecticut, and in Pennsylvania, near Union City and near Canton. Miss Little is from St. Louis.

HARDING'S

"deflation of labor" or who advance the argument that "wages must come down and union labor must be crushed," This will have an important bearing on the next campaign.

Fourth, preaching the outlawry of war, the president took a leaf out of Senator Borah's book of ideals in the senator's own state. Incidentally, the eagerness of Senator Borah to be seen with the president in Idaho and the interview given by him approving Mr. Harding's world court scheme as amended in the St. Louis speech means nothing more nor less than a recognition on the part of Mr. Borah that in the campaign of 1924 he must be a regular Republican in Idaho if he wants to be re-elected. Mr. Borah has slowly but surely been disavowing connection with a third party movement for president. Idaho Republicans say Borah must come in line and be a regular if he wants to be renominated. They have successfully amended the primary law so that Mr. Borah must cater to the regular organization in the state which is pro-Harding.

It will be noted, by the way, that Mr. Borah doesn't think the world court program will be finally acted upon by the senate in the next session of congress which fits in with the prediction made by the writer immediately after the St. Louis speech last week, namely that the world court controversy had been shelved until after the 1924 election for if it isn't acted upon at the next session as Mr. Borah prophesies, there will not be another meeting of congress until December, 1924. This also will give plenty of time to negotiate with foreign governments the suggested changes in the world court's constitution.

The Helena speech was distinctly pro-labor. It was utterly unlike any previous addresses in which Mr. Harding was wont to balance what nice things he said about labor with some equally weighted phrases about the rights of capital. The president felt this was an opportune occasion however to rid his administration, if possible, of the taint of employer influence which Samuel Gompers and others have been persistently attempting to fasten on it especially since Mr. Harding didn't recognize their candidates for secretary of labor at the outset and since Charles G. Dawes, of Chicago, intimate friend of Mr. Harding, started his "minute men" organization to help the cause of the "open shop" in American industrial warfare.

"I am quite aware," said the president in his prepared speech at Helena, "that there were some who imagined before the present administration was voted into responsibility, that it was going at least to acquiesce if not definitely sympathize with projects for the deflation of labor and the overthrow of labor organizations. Before this time these have come to realize their error. Nothing has been farther from the purpose of the present administration than any thot of destroying the right of either labor or capital to organize and each to deal in its organized capacity."

Mr. Harding in one part of his speeches made answer to the contention of Samuel Rea, president of the Pennsylvania railroad, who insists that the United States Railroad Labor Board is wrong in rebuking the Pennsylvania for failing to recognize the elected spokesmen of shop craft and clerical unions not affiliated with the labor organizations created and managed by the Pennsylvania itself.

"The right of organization and of co-operative dealings" said the president in this connection, "is not any longer the special prerogative of management and of capital. The right of men and brains and skill and brawn to organize, to bargain thru organizations, to select their own leaders and spokesmen is no less absolute than is the right of management and of capital to form and work thru those great concentrations of interests which we call corporations."

There is something evangelical about President Harding's western travels. His ardor for social justice and the rights of labor is mingled with expressions of deep religious fervor and moral appeal. Two of his predecessors were successful by similar petition in enhancing their prestige whatever effect it may have—whether it disappoints the so-called "hard boiled element in the Republican party which has been generous with campaign contributions because of a belief that Harding would bring back the "good old days" of low wages or whether it tends to bring the west back to a regular Republican president who proclaims himself a progressive—there can hardly be any doubt that Warren Harding is sincerely convinced of the merit of his own doctrine. He is inspired by an idealism that seems constafilly to be battling to get away from the materialistic tendency of the age. This is nowhere better illustrated than in the following lines of his peroration at Helena:

"Mankind never has stood more in need than it does now of the consolation and reassurances which derive from a firm religious faith. There must be no mistake whereby we shall confuse the things which are of eternity with those which are of time. We must not let our engrossment with the things of matter and of mind distract us from a proper concern for those which are of the spirit and the soul."

The Liberty Above All Others

THE current issue of The Nation contains the following thotful editorial on a subject which should always be uppermost in the minds of our people. It is especially timely as we approach our great natal day:

"The liberty to know, to utter, and to argue, and to argue freely according to conscience, is, as Milton said, above all other liberties. It is the foundation of the civil liberty of the citizen. It guarantees his right to state his grievances and to propose his remedies, and, because it guarantees that right, it tends to minimize the chance of disorderly change. Civil liberty means toleration for the opinions of others. It means toleration for the opinions not merely of those with whom the majority agree, but of those also whose words are believed to be fraught with danger and despair. It means not only that the rich, the wise, and the good shall speak, but that the despised, the fool, and the poor man shall also be heard.

"Toleration, be it said, does not mean agreement. Because we believe that all voices should be heard, it does not follow that we are to agree with every folly that is uttered. Toleration means a humility of spirit that is willing to concede that the other fellow may be right. It means a capacity to understand that desirable progress in this tentative world can come only thru free trade in ideas. Most of all it means a concern for the rights of others, for only when the rights of the most despised among us are secure can the market-place of the mind be kept open.

"The capacity of a people to insure and to possess civil liberty and toleration is the measure of the civilization to which they have attained. Freedom, happiness, knowledge, these are the goals of civilization, and they are born of the opportunity to experience life, as truly for whole peoples as for individuals. If that opportunity be broad, success will follow. And who can doubt that the capacity for civil liberty and toleration is the precise measure, alike for community and individuals, of the opportunity to live fully?

"It is wise, then, from time to time for a people to consider their condition regarding civil liberty. How do we of these United States fare? A glance first at the past will perhaps not be amiss. At the time when the American Colonies were achieving their independence of Great Britain, the phrases of civil liberty were upon the lips of every patriot. Civil liberty was an integral part of the political philosophy for which the American Revolution was fought. And yet, altho that war was fought for political freedom, the civil liberty of the Tory minority which opposed independence received scant consideration. The Civil War, too, was fought for freedom—for the freedom of an enslaved race, but again the minority which believed in the right of the South to secede received short shrift. When the United States entered the Great War, civil liberty and tolerance left us once more. The minority of opposition—radical for the most part—were vindictively put upon.

"But these violations of the principle of civil liberty occurred during the war, and war, almost by definition, is a step back from the ways of civilization. We can judge better of the reality of civil liberty by its condition after war has passed and in time of peace. And there is a striking parallel to be found between the history of the years just passed and American history of a century and a quarter ago.

"In 1798 Europe was arrayed against France, shaken and torn by revolution. The gospel of liberte, egalite, fraternite was feared in every land. French radicalism sent its propagandists abroad, and in many lands its sympathizers and advocates made themselves hated. Our country was not exempt. Genet had come to our shores, and voices, often in high places, expressed sympathy for revolutionary France. The Federalist Party, then in power, became greatly exercised. The Chief Justice of Massachusetts denounced "the French systemmongers, from the Quintumvirate of Paris to the Vice-President" (Jefferson) as "apostles of atheism and anarchy, bloodshed and plunder." In such a mood of excitement Congress passed the Sedition Act of 1798 and prosecutions under it followed. None of the sentences exceeded eighteen months, but they aroused the resentment of the people, and at the next election the Federalists were swept from office and the obnoxious act perished. Jefferson's vigorous and pungent condemnation of the act and Madison's carefully reasoned demonstration of its inconsistency with American principles of government, make it abundantly clear that civil liberty was then a reality in American political life. Indeed, the fate of the Sedition Act is a chapter of American history that we should regard with pride.

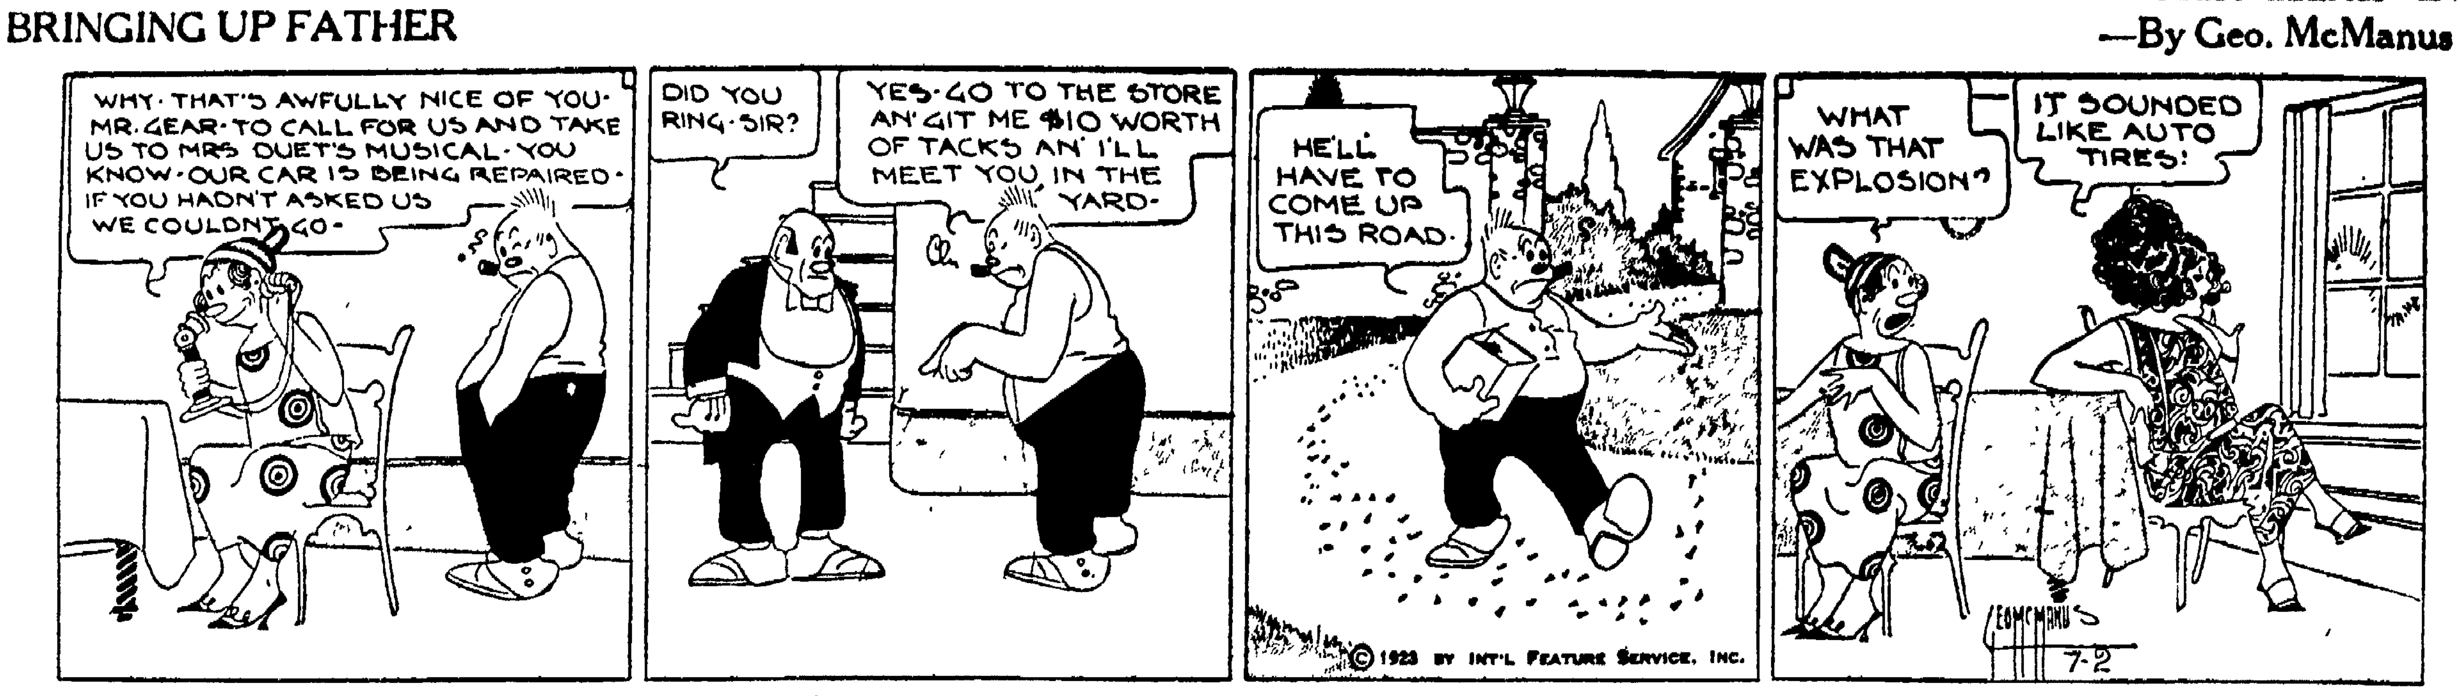

"Turn now to the years following the World War. Europe is again in tumult, and revolution is once more abroad. The great Powers now unite against Moscow, and Russian radicalism spreads its propaganda wherever it may. Its new political and economic philosophy is hated and feared as was the French in 1798. In the United States, farthest removed from the seat of contagion, and safest, because our people have not suffered as have the peoples of Europe, the excitement and fear of the new radicalism have run highest. Our State legislatures have enacted criminal-syndicalism, criminal-anarchy, and sedition laws until these statutes, which have the same quality as the old Sedition Act, are the law of no less than thirty-nine States. Prosecutions under them have followed aplenty, and the sentences meted out have not been light. Instead of eighteen months they have run as high as five to ten years, and the trials have been numbered by the score, as against the ten trials under the Act of 1798.

"The history of a century ago would have led us to expect a wave of resentment against these infringements of civil liberty, but the wave of resentment has not come. The more intelligent of our daily newspapers are now urging the repeal of these laws, but for four years hysterical fear in dealing with radical minorities has replaced toleration and discussion. Reports of a sensational State trial for merely being present at an alleged seditious gathering in Michigan were in the daily news but a few weeks ago, and but last May nine men and women were indicted under the Pennsylvania sedition law for membership in a forbidden organization. The tide is receding, but it has still far to go

"What shall be said of this contrast between 1798 and 1923? What needs saying is that a contrast exists—that the average American of 1923 is less concerned about the condition of civil liberty than the average American of 1798. That this is not altogether his fault is doubtless true. He has been told so many times that the sedition prosecutions of the present are necessary for his safety that he has come to believe it But, unless his country is to suffer irreparable injury, it behooves him to shake himself out of his assurance, to examine the situation for himself, and then to take thot as to the future."

If I were seated on the bench, a learned and fearless jurist, I'd soak the greedy man or wench who robs the gentle tourist Now on the hills and thru the dells a million cars are dodging, and tourists stop at punk hotels and ask for grub and lodging. Oh, here and there a Boniface gives value for their money, he is a man who loves the race, who'd make our lives more sunny But there and here the landlords dump bum victuals in the manger, and argue that he is a chump who does not fleece the stranger Some little burgs along the way are organized for pillage, and luckless is the touring jay who lands in such a village The merchant princes pass the word, when such a jay's approaching: "Here comes another stranger bird—we'll give his name a roaching!" And everything he has to buy is priced so high he'll shiver, and wring his hands and long to die beneath his rusty flivver All towns would find it worth their while, emerging from their blindness, to greet the tourist with a smile, and load him down with kindness The stranger who's within our gates should not be cinched or beaten, let's feed him costly figs and dates, and bless him

PEOPLES' FORUM

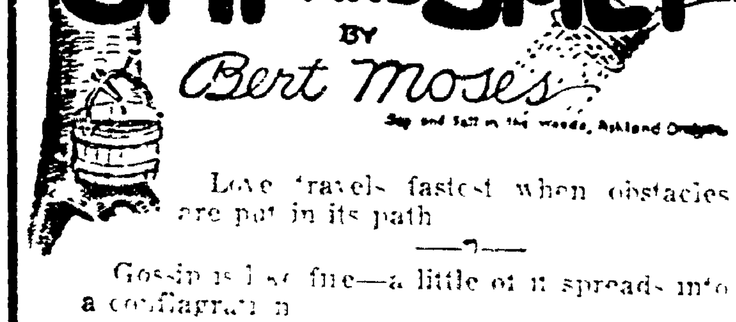

WANTS A REFERENDUM

Editor The Tribune:

Will you please allow space in the People's Forum refreshing the public mind with a few facts in which all are or at least should be interested. I have reference to the Taft taxation law and also the Albaugh measure abolishing the present system of assessment of property which is conducted with the township as the unit and marked the county the unit creating a county board of assessment. Both laws were vetoed by the governor and afterwards passed over his veto by the general assembly. The people realized that an injustice had been handed the taxpayer, the home owner, farmer and real estate owner It fell to the lot of organized real estate men to propose a referendum. The petitions for which have been prepared by as able counsel as is found in the state of Ohio These petitions are now being circulated all over the state and at the earliest convenience will be distributed in Coshocton-co at public places and in private hands making it convenient for all who wish to sign them.

ORDINANCE NO. ——
Appropriating surplus funds now in the water works department of the city of Coshocton in an amount sufficient to pay for the construction of a water connection between the larger and smaller wells, and authorizing the director of public service to contract for such improvement.

Be it ordained by the Council of the City of Coshocton, State of Ohio:

SECTION 1. There is hereby appropriated from the surplus now in the water works funds of the City of Coshocton a sufficient sum, not to exceed $1800.00, for the purpose of installing a proper valve for shutting off the water connection between the larger and the smaller city wells.

SECTION 2. That the Director of Public Service of the said City of Coshocton, Ohio, is hereby authorized and directed to contract for the necessary labor and material, and to install a proper valve for shutting off the water connection between the larger and smaller city wells and such director is hereby authorized to contract for such labor and material without advertisement.

SECTION 3. This ordinance is hereby declared to be an emergency ordinance necessary to the immediate preservation of the public health, peace and safety in said city of Coshocton. The reason for such necessity is, that the city wells are settling, resulting in a strain on the intake mains to an extent that may cause the larger main to break and there being no means of shutting off or disconnecting the larger well from the smaller wells, water could not be pumped until the larger main was repaired, and the time required for such repair would endanger the City's water supply. It is therefore necessary to at once install a proper valve in the connection between the larger and the smaller wells so that the water can be shut off from the larger well and permit pumping to continue from the smaller wells until the main leading from the larger well could be repaired. Therefore this ordinance passed in Council this 29th day of June, 1923.

Attest.
O. S. BOWEN,
Clerk.
W. R. DAVIS,
President of Council.
Approved by the Mayor this 29th day of June, 1923.
W. S. TISH,
Mayor.

WOMEN AVERAGE A YEAR LONGER THAN THE STRONGER SEX

Years ago insurance companies required an extra premium when they insured women. The theory at that time was that women were not as good insurance risks as men. In the experience of recent years by all insurance companies and societies it has developed that women are actually better risk than men.

In other words the span of life of a woman is approximately one year longer than the average life of a man. This is accounted for largely by the exposure of men to accident and the tendency of men to develop hart, kidney and brain [illegible] especially between the age of 50 and 60 years. Since the insurance companies [illegible] [illegible] women on the same rates [illegible] for insuring men.

According to Dr. Geo. W. Horlar of C[illegible], the experience of this society covering a period of 20 years discloses that while 20 per cent of the members of the organization are women, they only contribute 24 per cent of the d[illegible] during that period. A [illegible] of practically every [illegible] will disclose 10 grandmothers to 9 grandfathers.

Roosevelt and Hamilton Linked in Impressive Medal Presentation at White House

President Harding Calls Roosevelt "Sentinel on the Ramparts of the Republic"

Three notable Americans received national recognition for their public services when President Harding, with impressive ceremony, recently presented the Gold Medals of Honor awarded by the Roosevelt Memorial Association to Miss Louisa Lee Schuyler, Professor Henry Fairfield Osborn and General Leonard Wood. The bestowal took place in the East Room of the White House before a distinguished audience which included Mrs. Harding, M. Jusserand, the French Ambassador; Secretary Hughes, Secretary Wallace, Secretary Work, Secretary Davis, Secretary Hoover, Ambassador George Harvey, Ambassador Henry B. Fletcher, Senator George Wharton Pepper, and Will H. Hays, former Postmaster-General.

The recipients of the medals were chosen for this honor by the trustees of the Roosevelt Memorial Association because of their service to the American people in three different fields of activities intimately associated with the career of Theodore Roosevelt. Miss Schuyler received the medal for "the promotion of the welfare of women and children;" Professor Osborn for "the promotion of the study of natural history" and General Wood for "the promotion of the national defense." Miss Schuyler, who is eighty-six years old, is the great granddaughter of Alexander Hamilton. On account of illness she was unable to receive the medal in person.

Links Roosevelt with Hamilton

"I think I should have felt an especial satisfaction", said President Harding "in bestowing a mark of recognition upon a great granddaughter of Alexander Hamilton. How curiously and impressively the fact of her descent and this mark of recognition, connect up the outstanding founder in the making of the Republic with one who later became a sentinel on the ramparts, ever ready to defend its ideals and its liberties. There is nothing in life comparable to the inspiration of service, and I would like you to say to the recipient of this medal that it has been a very great pleasure not only to transmit it, and to echo some of the ideals of the great Roosevelt, but to pay to her the tribute of doing that which to my mind is the greatest thing in the world."

The medal for General Wood, who is at present in the Philippines, was received in his behalf by Colonel Charles L. Kilburn.

President Lauds Wood

"Like all Americans," said the President in presenting the medal, "I know of the contribution of General Wood to the national defense. I know of his spirit of devotion which has been an inspiration throughout America. I know of the notable service he has already done. And I have peculiar reason to know of the most distinguished and patriotic service which he is now performing. As in the other cases, I can understand how the spirit of Theodore Roosevelt would rejoice in this bestowal of honor to his intimates, whom he greatly trusted and very highly admired. Surely, it is a becoming offering on the part of the Roosevelt Memorial Association, because it conveys in another form the thought of the mindfulness, the earnestness, the readiness of Colonel Roosevelt to be of service to his country. I wish you would convey to General Wood this medal, with an expression of my rejoicing that he has thus been honored, and, with it, a word of very cordial congratulations."

In bestowing the medal on Dr. Osborn, the President remarked on the "very rare distinction" which it was "to have so pursued one's activity as to earn the devoted and trusted friendship of the late Theodore Roosevelt."

FARM BOOKS DO NOT TELL TOTAL INCOME

Living That the Home Place Provides Family Isn't Figured, Economists Show

"Much of the discontent which is aroused today by comparison of farm and city incomes would be in part allayed if it were realized that farm and city incomes are not strictly comparable."

So rural economists at the Ohio State University open report of a survey in a southern Ohio county which was put on to find out how much "living" a farm will provide the family, over and above what shows on the books.

Ralph Taber and C. R. Arnold, the specialists reporting, first explain that statements, frequently made, about the American farmer's income being around $300 a year are in terms of labor income; that is, his farm profits for the year less interest on the investment.

"Moreover," remarks Mr. Taber, "neither labor income nor farm income takes into consideration the fact that much of the farm product is not sold, but is consumed by the farm family. Likewise, no credit is allowed for the rental value of the house."

This value of products and rental the investigators found to average $579 at country prices, and $1204 at city prices, on 30 Scioto County farms. These same farms showed for the year an excess of cash receipts over expenditures amounting to $1293.

It is not argued in the report that the resulting total income is adequate, but simply that "it is unwise to try to stir up rural discontent with unwarranted comparisons."

TODAY'S BRIGHT SPOT

Ever hear of a man fishing on Sunday out of a window of a Methodist church while the sermon is in progress?

Oscar Heimbaugh, Akron, teacher of chemistry at Central High School, declares this feat is possible.

He told Mayor D. C. Rybolt about it in a postal card received by the mayor. Heimbaugh is visiting in Gregory, Mich.

Pious city officials are looking up train schedules to Gregory.

The boy will be turned over to juvenile authorities.

NELSONVILLE, July 2—Officers are in a quandary as to what to do about the case of Henry Heining, 80, just detected for the third time with a still and some newly-made liquor in his possession. They hesitate to send the aged offender to prison, but must shortly decide upon some way to care for him.

FLUSHING, July 2—The Kennon mine near here is idle due to the slump in the coal industry. Approximately 125 are out of work. Although the lake season is on, and the car supply is sufficient now the Eastern Ohio mining is, in most instances, far from satisfactory.

MARTINS FERRY, July 2.—A woman newspaper reporter was one of the occupants of a press car sent by special invitation to witness a Ku Klux Klan initiation near Dallas, W. Va. The scene of the initiation was illuminated with electric lights, and 100 guards were on duty. Singing of national airs and burning of aerial and stationary crosses were features. Picnic refreshments were served.

OTTAWA, July 2.—"The wise farmer is sticking to the soil, and is going to be the winner in the end," declared C. W. Johnson, supervisor in the loan department of the Prudential Insurance Co., following a trip through northwestern Ohio counties. "The farmer was hard hit by the depression, but they are making re-investments and purchasing more land," Johnson declared.

POMEROY, July 2. — A general search is being made for the motorist who freed a car containing three persons from the road near here. One of the occupants was an aged woman, who was severely injured in the crash, both legs being fractured. Several clews as to the identity of the driver have been run down, but have proven false.

LIMA, July 2. — "I want it understood that this court issues no divorces, except with the understanding that there is to be no hasty re-marriage," declared Judge H. W. Blanchy, Van Wert, in the divorce trial of Mrs. Hazel Urban, Leipsic, against George Urban, Toledo. Upon assurance that no remarriage was intended, Mrs. Urban was given custody of the five-year-old son, and $6.50 a week for his care.

CANTON, July 2. — Charles Fuqua, 9, is dead here as the result of a bullet wound in the abdomen, accidentally inflicted by his 11-year-old brother Robert. The two boys, alone at the Fuqua home, found a .38 calibre revolver. As the older brother placed the gun under a pillow, it was discharged, the bullet hitting the younger brother.

LIMA, July 2. — The city commission is considering suggestions that the city police department should be reorganized. According to reports, during three weeks in June, there were 20 burglary calls, and four automobiles and 33 bicycles were stolen. None of the burglaries have been solved, and no arrests made, it was stated. It has been pointed out that there are only three patrolmen on the night shift to cover the entire city.

Mrs. Lacey Gained 20 Lbs. By Taking Tanlac

"After taking Tanlac it was simply astonishing how well I began to eat and how good my food tasted, and I gained at least twenty pounds in weight, too," said Mrs. J. D. Lacey, 406 Spicer St., Akron, Ohio.

"I had a severe case of the flu that left me so weak I just could sit up in bed a little. I had no appetite, all my strength seemed gone, and I had constant pains and cramps in my stomach, with attacks of gas bloating when I would almost smother.

"But Tanlac took right hold of my troubles and in a short time it stopped those pains and cramps and made my digestion even better than ever before. In a little while I was no longer an invalid, for Tanlac gave me an abundance of strength and energy and my weight increased surprisingly. I still take Tanlac now and then as a tonic, and it always gives the finest results."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 37 million bottles sold.

HARDING RESUMES WESTWARD TRIP AFTER TWO-DAY REST IN YELLOWSTONE NAT'L PARK

Will Command Giant Airship ZR-3

Captain G. W. Steele, United States Navy, has been appointed to command the new Zeppelin airship ZR-3, the largest in the world, now being built by the Germans, at Friedrichshaven, for the American Government, under the terms of the treaty of peace.

BY GEORGE R. HOLMES.

ENROUTE WITH PRESIDENT HARDING TO SPOKANE, July 2—Refreshed by his rest in Yellowstone park—the only real rest he has had since leaving Washington—President Harding started today on the last lap of his leisurely journey across the continent.

Four more speeches will be made before the president sets sail for Alaska and he is looking forward to them with keen zest. He went into the mountains of the Yellowstone tired from ten days of incessant speechmaking and crowds, but he came out today wholly rested.

The two days of quiet in the mountains gave him the time needed for reflection and recreation. He is highly pleased with the results of the trip thus far, he told friends today. He has preached the gospel of contentment and middle-of-the-road conservatism to the people of the west for ten days now, and he personally believes his utterances have been not without effect in allaying some of the general unrest that he has heard so much of in Washington since last November.

In some respects the president has been surprised and gratified. He had heard in the whitehouse so many tales of the west seething with unrest that he was fully prepared for opposition when he left Washington, but he has not been bothered in this respect. His audiences for the most part have listened to his prepared addresses with marked attention and interest. The president's speeches were prepared with an eye to combatting this same unrest and each of them has contained an appeal, either directly or indirectly, for the public generally to disregard the extremists on both sides of the big problems.

In St. Louis, in his world court speech, the president scored both the pro-leaguers and the irreconcilables, and appealed for a middle course policy on the court.

In his agricultural speech at Hutchinson, he asked the farmers to disregard the radicals who are urging revolt in the rural sections. He told them of bettering conditions and pointed to the vast array of remedial legislation already enacted in proof that Washington is alive to their problems.

In his prohibition speech at Denver he denounced both the "fanatical drys and the fanatical wets" and asked public support for enforcement of law, whether the law is popular or not.

These are but examples of the president's steady appeal for conservative thinking and acceptance of conditions as they are. Even in his short rear platform speeches he has usually managed to ring in an admonition to his audiences that they should look at the rest of the world and then be contented with conditions in the United States. His audiences will hear more of it before he concludes his tour.

The presidential special is due to arrive at Spokane this afternoon where the president will make a speech tonight, dealing with reclamation policies. The people of the northwest are vitally concerned with reclamation and Mr. Harding plans to handle the subject in considerable detail.
